R.H.S. MEMORIES

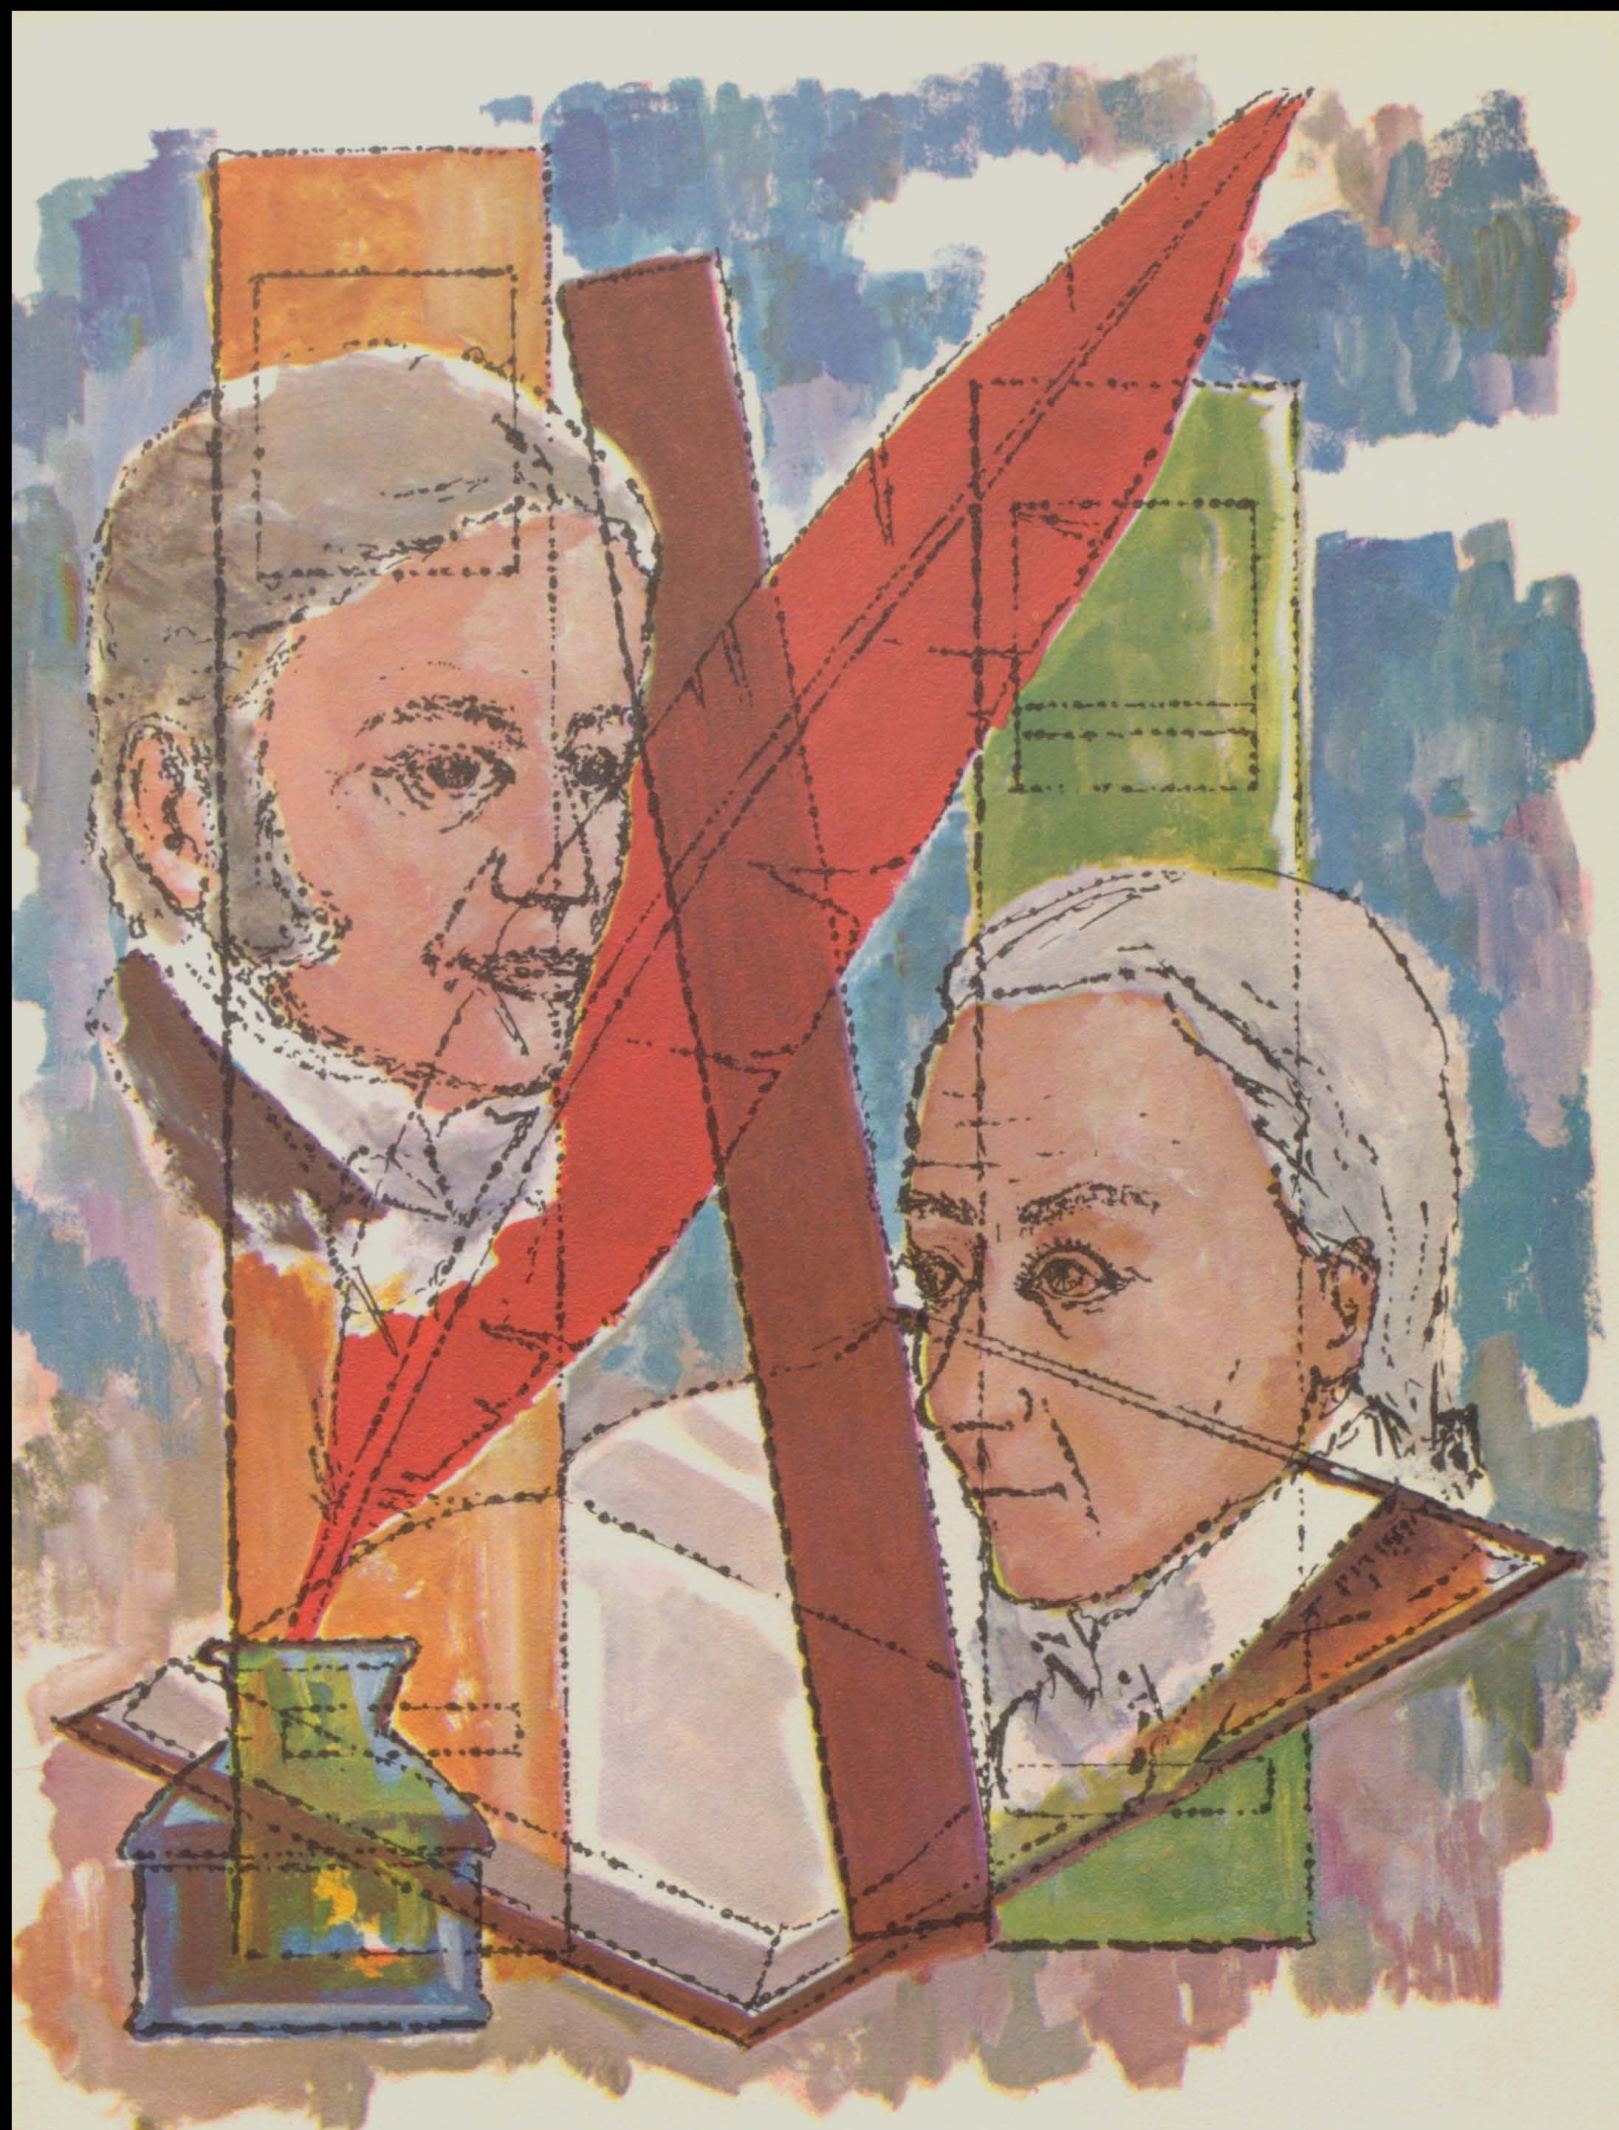

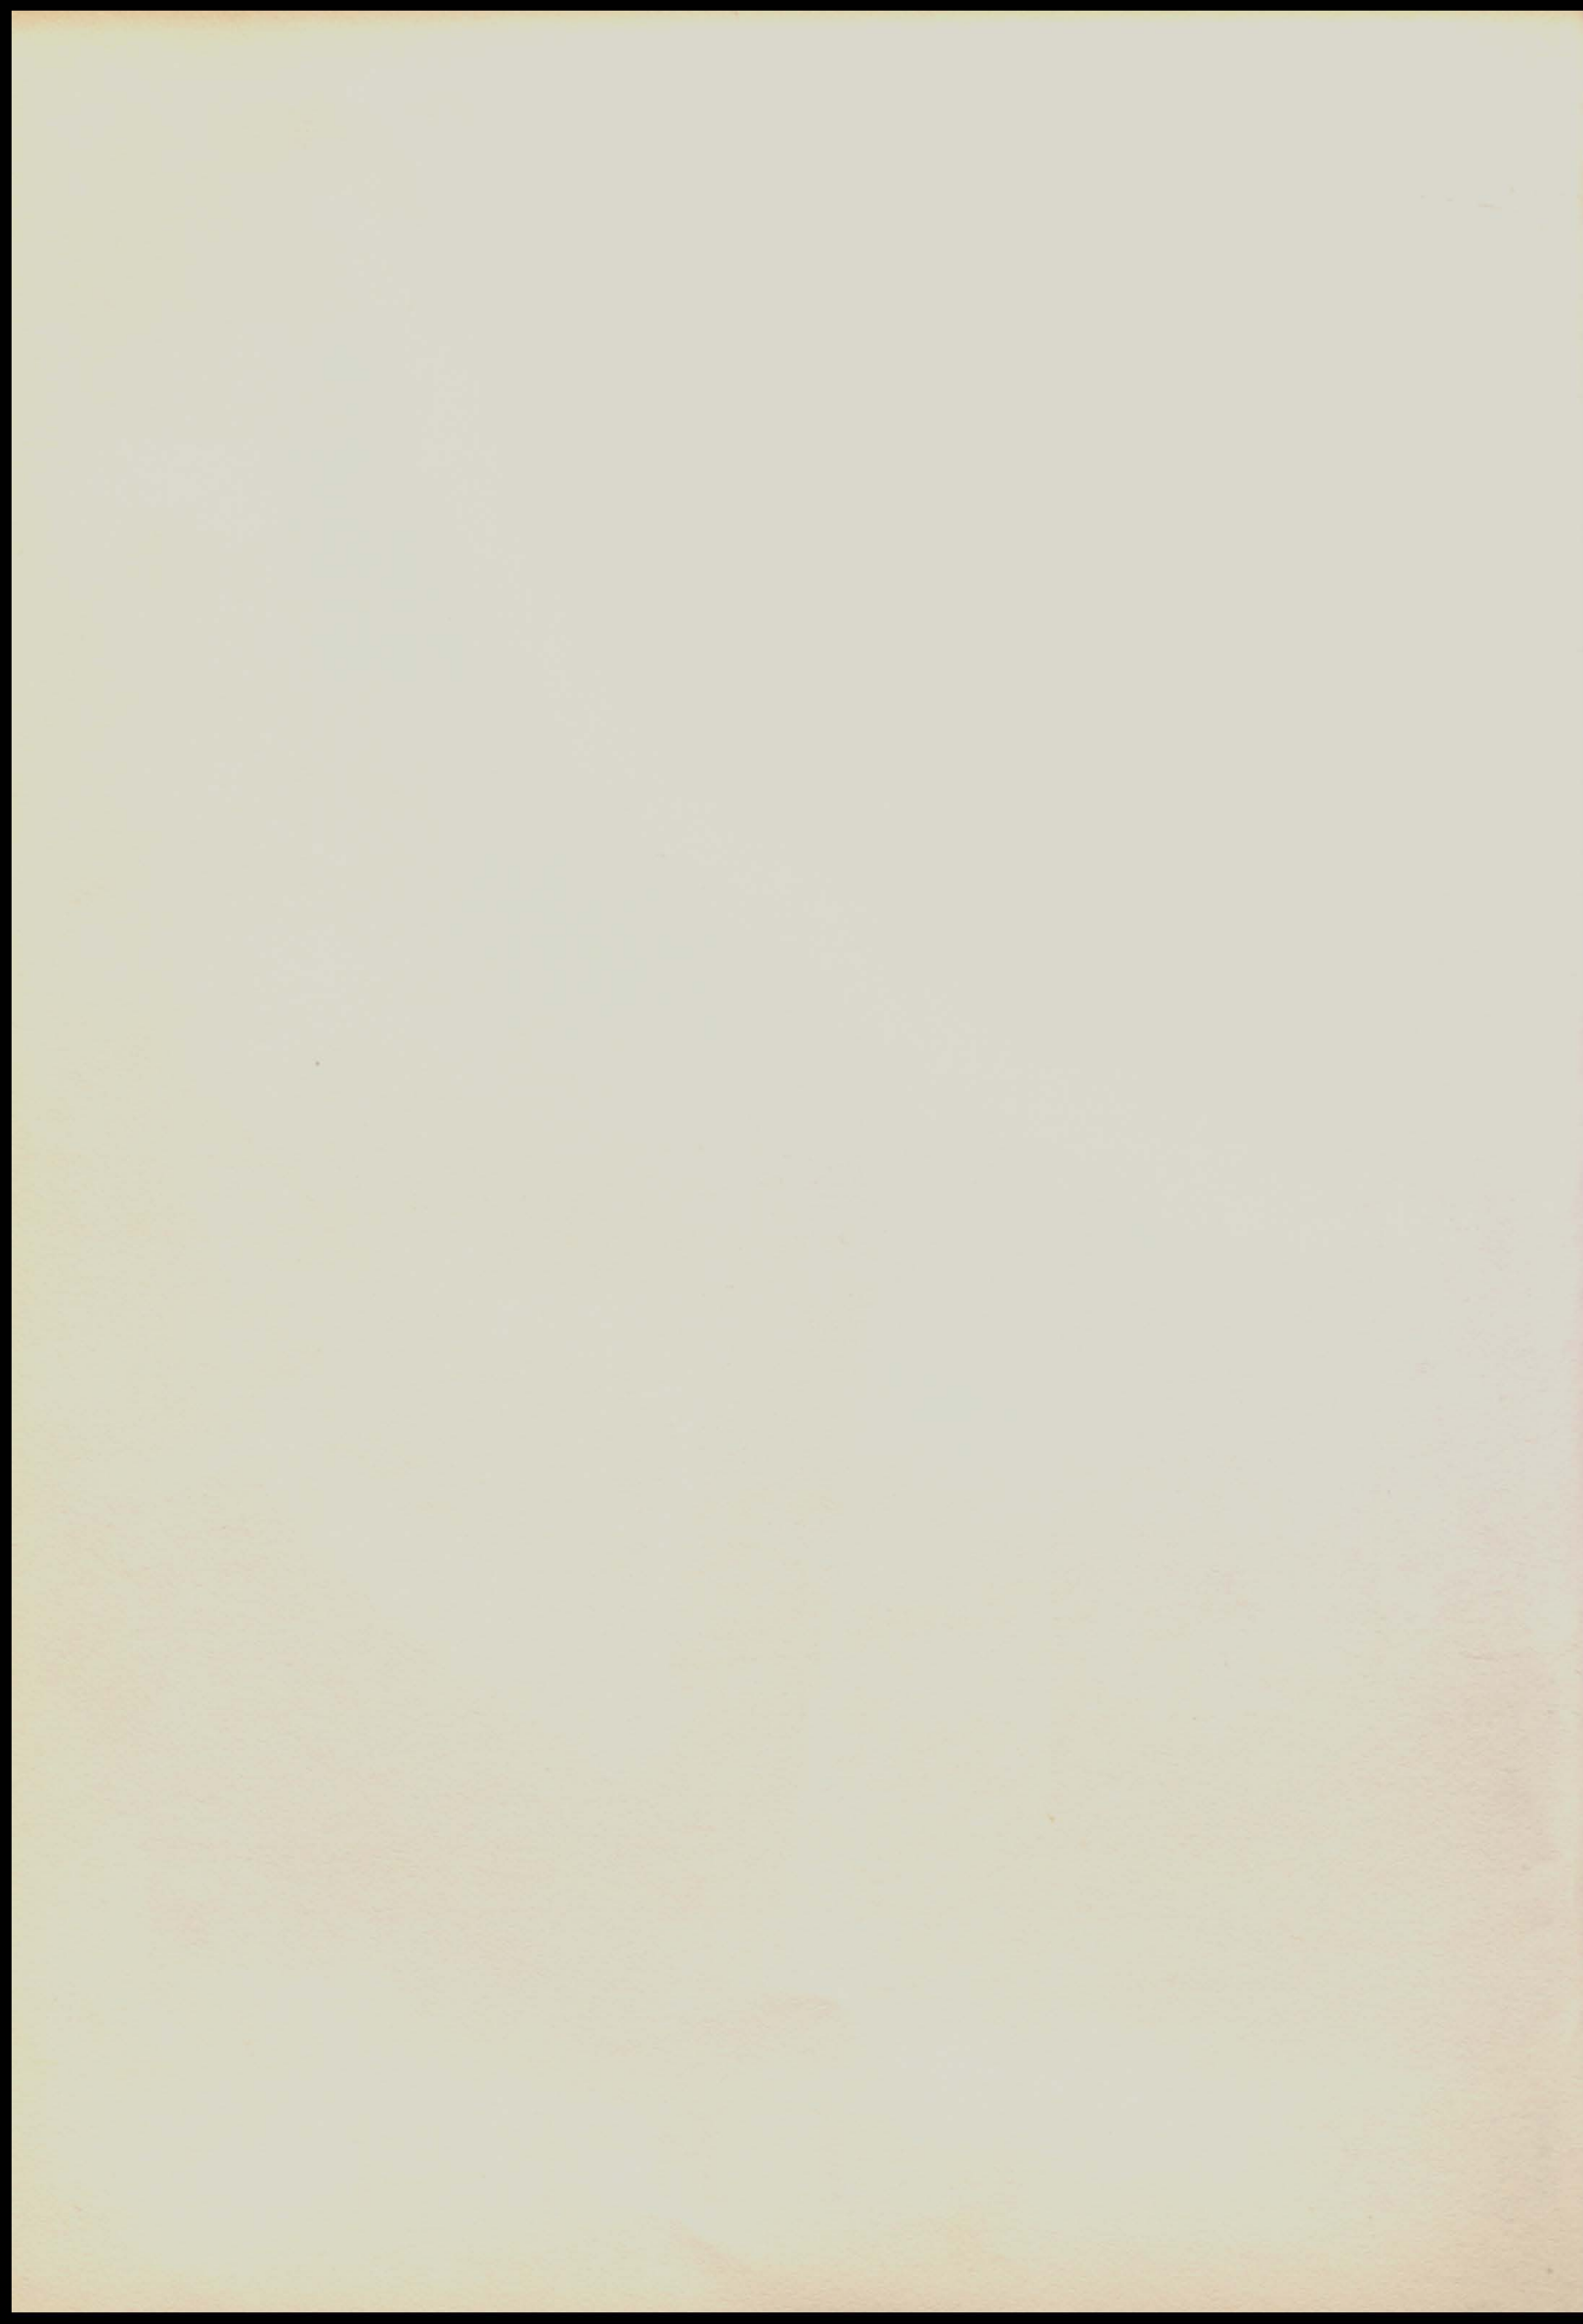

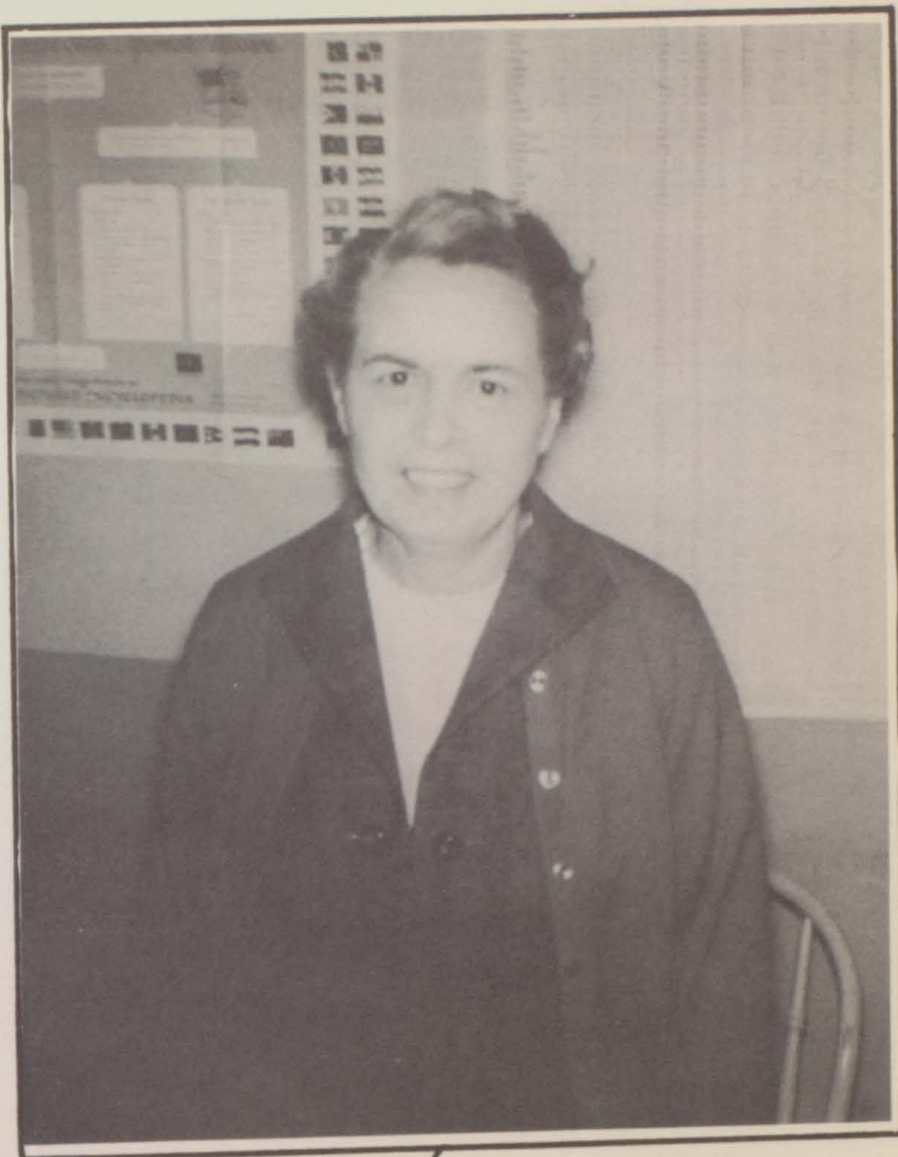

EX LIBRIS

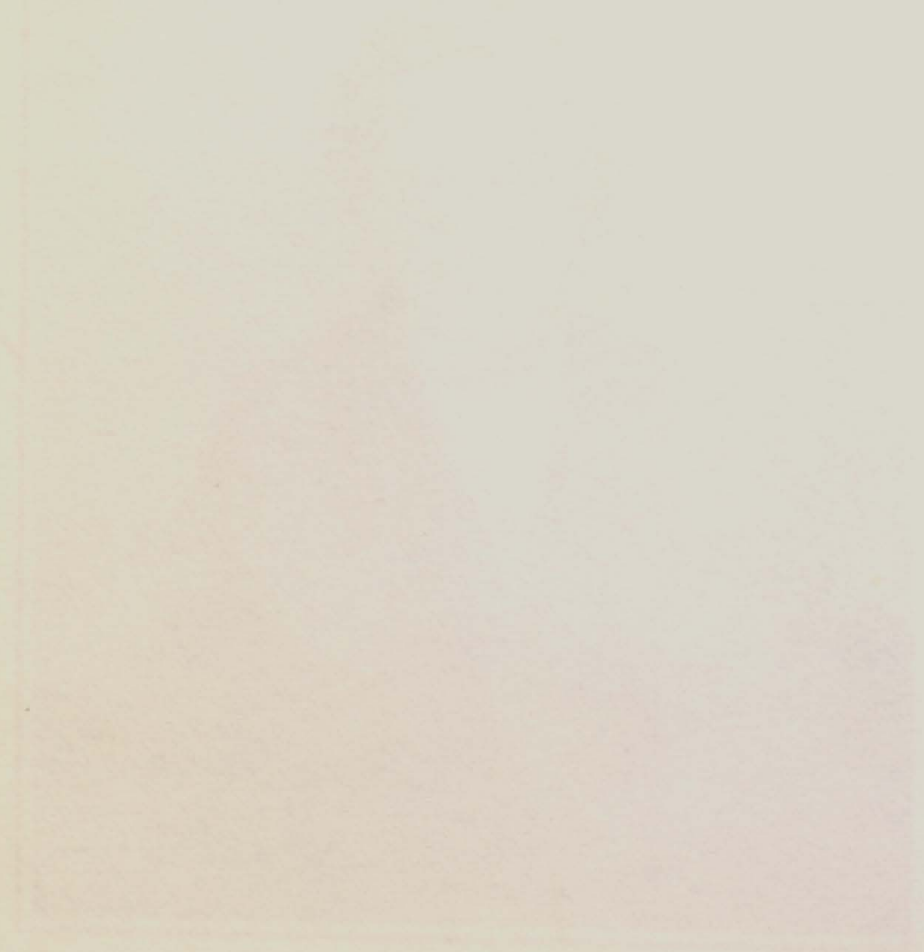

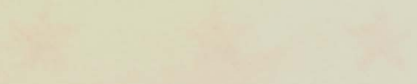

We dedicate this yearbook to Mrs. Dutton, who has sacrificed much to make our high school years more pleasant. Through her efforts, a school library has been established, and all that she has done for us has been greatly appreciated.

Class Poem

Charlie's president of our class,
Cherry keeps our treasure.
He will date a pretty lass,
While guys are still her pleasure.

Fred is not the quiet type,
His famous sayings always rate.
From Larry we never hear a gripe,
On his guitar he plays real great.

Carolyn gives us many tunes,
Dickie gives us laughter.
One is serious, one will "spoon"
And do "his" homework after.

Joanie loves to drive around:
She has a lot of fun.
Ronnie makes a lot of sound
Talking to all and everyone.

Doug and Pat are new this year:
Welcome to our class.
Many a friendship you've made here.
We know they all will last.

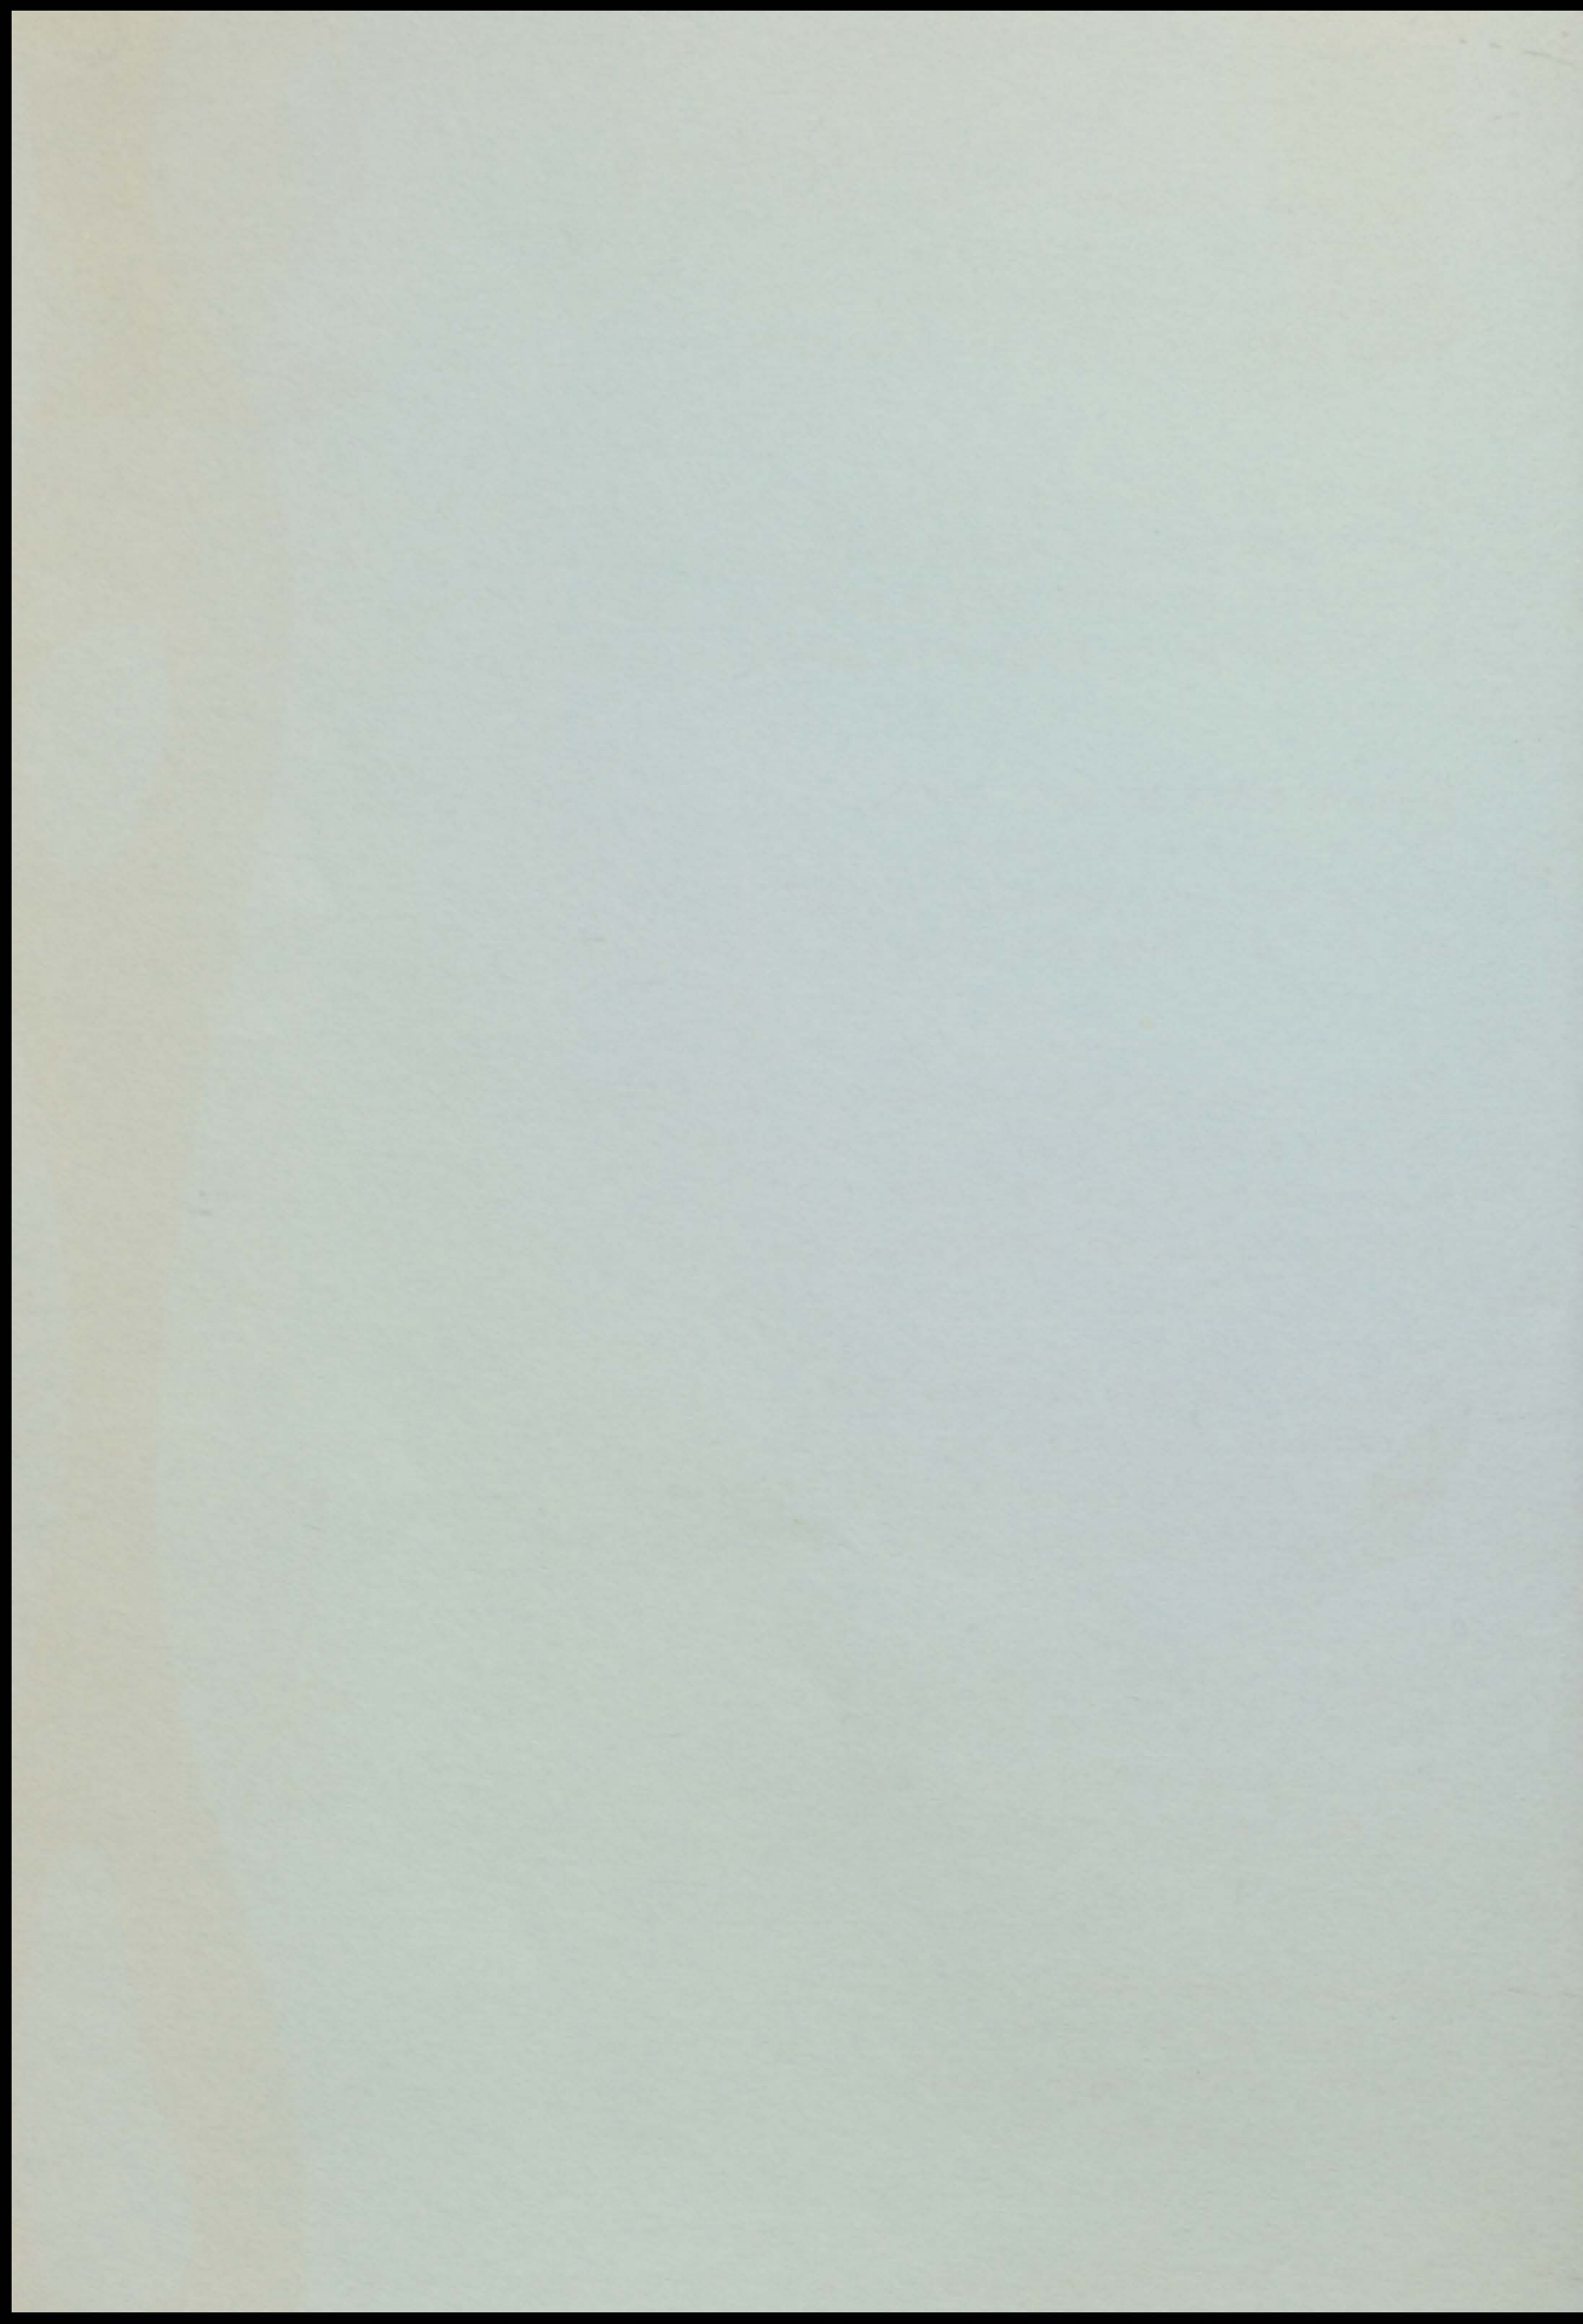

Doug is handsome--very tall;
Basketball he loves to play.
Joan is smart--short and small;
She may be a scientist one day.

Rosalie always has a smile
For each and everyone.
Nonie's driven many a mile
In her search for fun.

Richard is a serious lad,
He fixes things a lot.
The class of '62's not bad,
It's really pretty hot!!

And so we leave with fond farewells
To those who're left behind.
You have our books, our desks, our bells,
Please try to treat them kind.

History

The class of 1961 began their Freshmen year with a total of eighteen members: Aime Duval, Cherry Jones, Ronald Curtis, Fred Smead, Sue Stoddard, Charles Clancy, Rosalie Brown, Dick White, Richard Eaton, Larry Brodeur, Mary Twitchell, Joan Larsen, Winona Carden, Joan Steventon, Doug Lyon, Carole Stone, Carolyn Simpson and Roland Brown.

We elected the following class officers:

President-Charles Clancy
Vice President-Joan Steventon
Secretary-Carole Stone
Treasurer-Aime Duval
Student Council-Winona Carden
Dick White

The Sophomores gave us our Freshman Reception. That is a day that we will never forget. The boys were wearing high-heeled shoes, a bransack dress with a big bow in the back, earrings, hair in pigtails and powdered, and they all found it hard to walk. The girls wore one man's hip boot and one man's work shoe, man's pants on backwards, a man's P.J. top on backwards, a pipe in mouth, hair pinned on top of their heads and powdered, and a man's felt hat. In the evening all performed their stunts quite willingly.

Our Freshman year was quite enjoyable, thanks to members of the faculty. They were Mr. Noble, Mrs. Hubbard, Miss Marsh, Mr. Trutor, and Mr. Lary.

In 1959 we started our Sophomore year with sixteen members. We had lost Aime Duval, Mary Twitchell, Richard Eaton and Roland Brown. We gained two others, Natalie Clook and Judy Holden.

We elected the following class officers:

President-Dick White
Vice President-Charles Clancy
Secretary-Carole Stone
Treasurer-Judy Holden
Student Council-Carolyn Simpson
Douglas Lyon

We sponsored the Freshman Reception and had a great time taking out our revenge on the incoming Freshman. We also put on a dance following the reception.

The most important event in our Sophomore year was receiving our class rings.

Our Sophomore year we lost Mr. Trutor and gained Mrs. Dutton from Bethel.

There Will Be a Meeting

"The famous newspaper reporter, J. Elizabeth Larsen, is now conducting interviews with personnel connected with the magnificent new UNIVAK machine, the wonder of the century. For an early look at what is going on down there, we are publishing a few of her personal notes:

"As soon as I arrived at the Airport, I was greeted, to my surprise, by 5-Star-Pfc. Douglas Munyon, officer in command of Weighoff Base. After chatting briefly with him I learned that several of my other old classmates were located here on base; I decided I would look up as many of them as I could after I had concluded my interviews.

"First I was to interview the designers of the machine and who did they turn out to be but Douglas Lyon and Charles Clancy. Charlie had gone into business and decided that it would be easier to invent a new electronic brain than to do all the accounting by hand, so he started the project in his spare time. He soon discovered that he would need a chemical that hadn't been invented, so he called on his old friend Doug Lyon, who was now a chemical engineer, and he fixed one up in short order. I hadn't seen them in years and we had a wonderful visit.

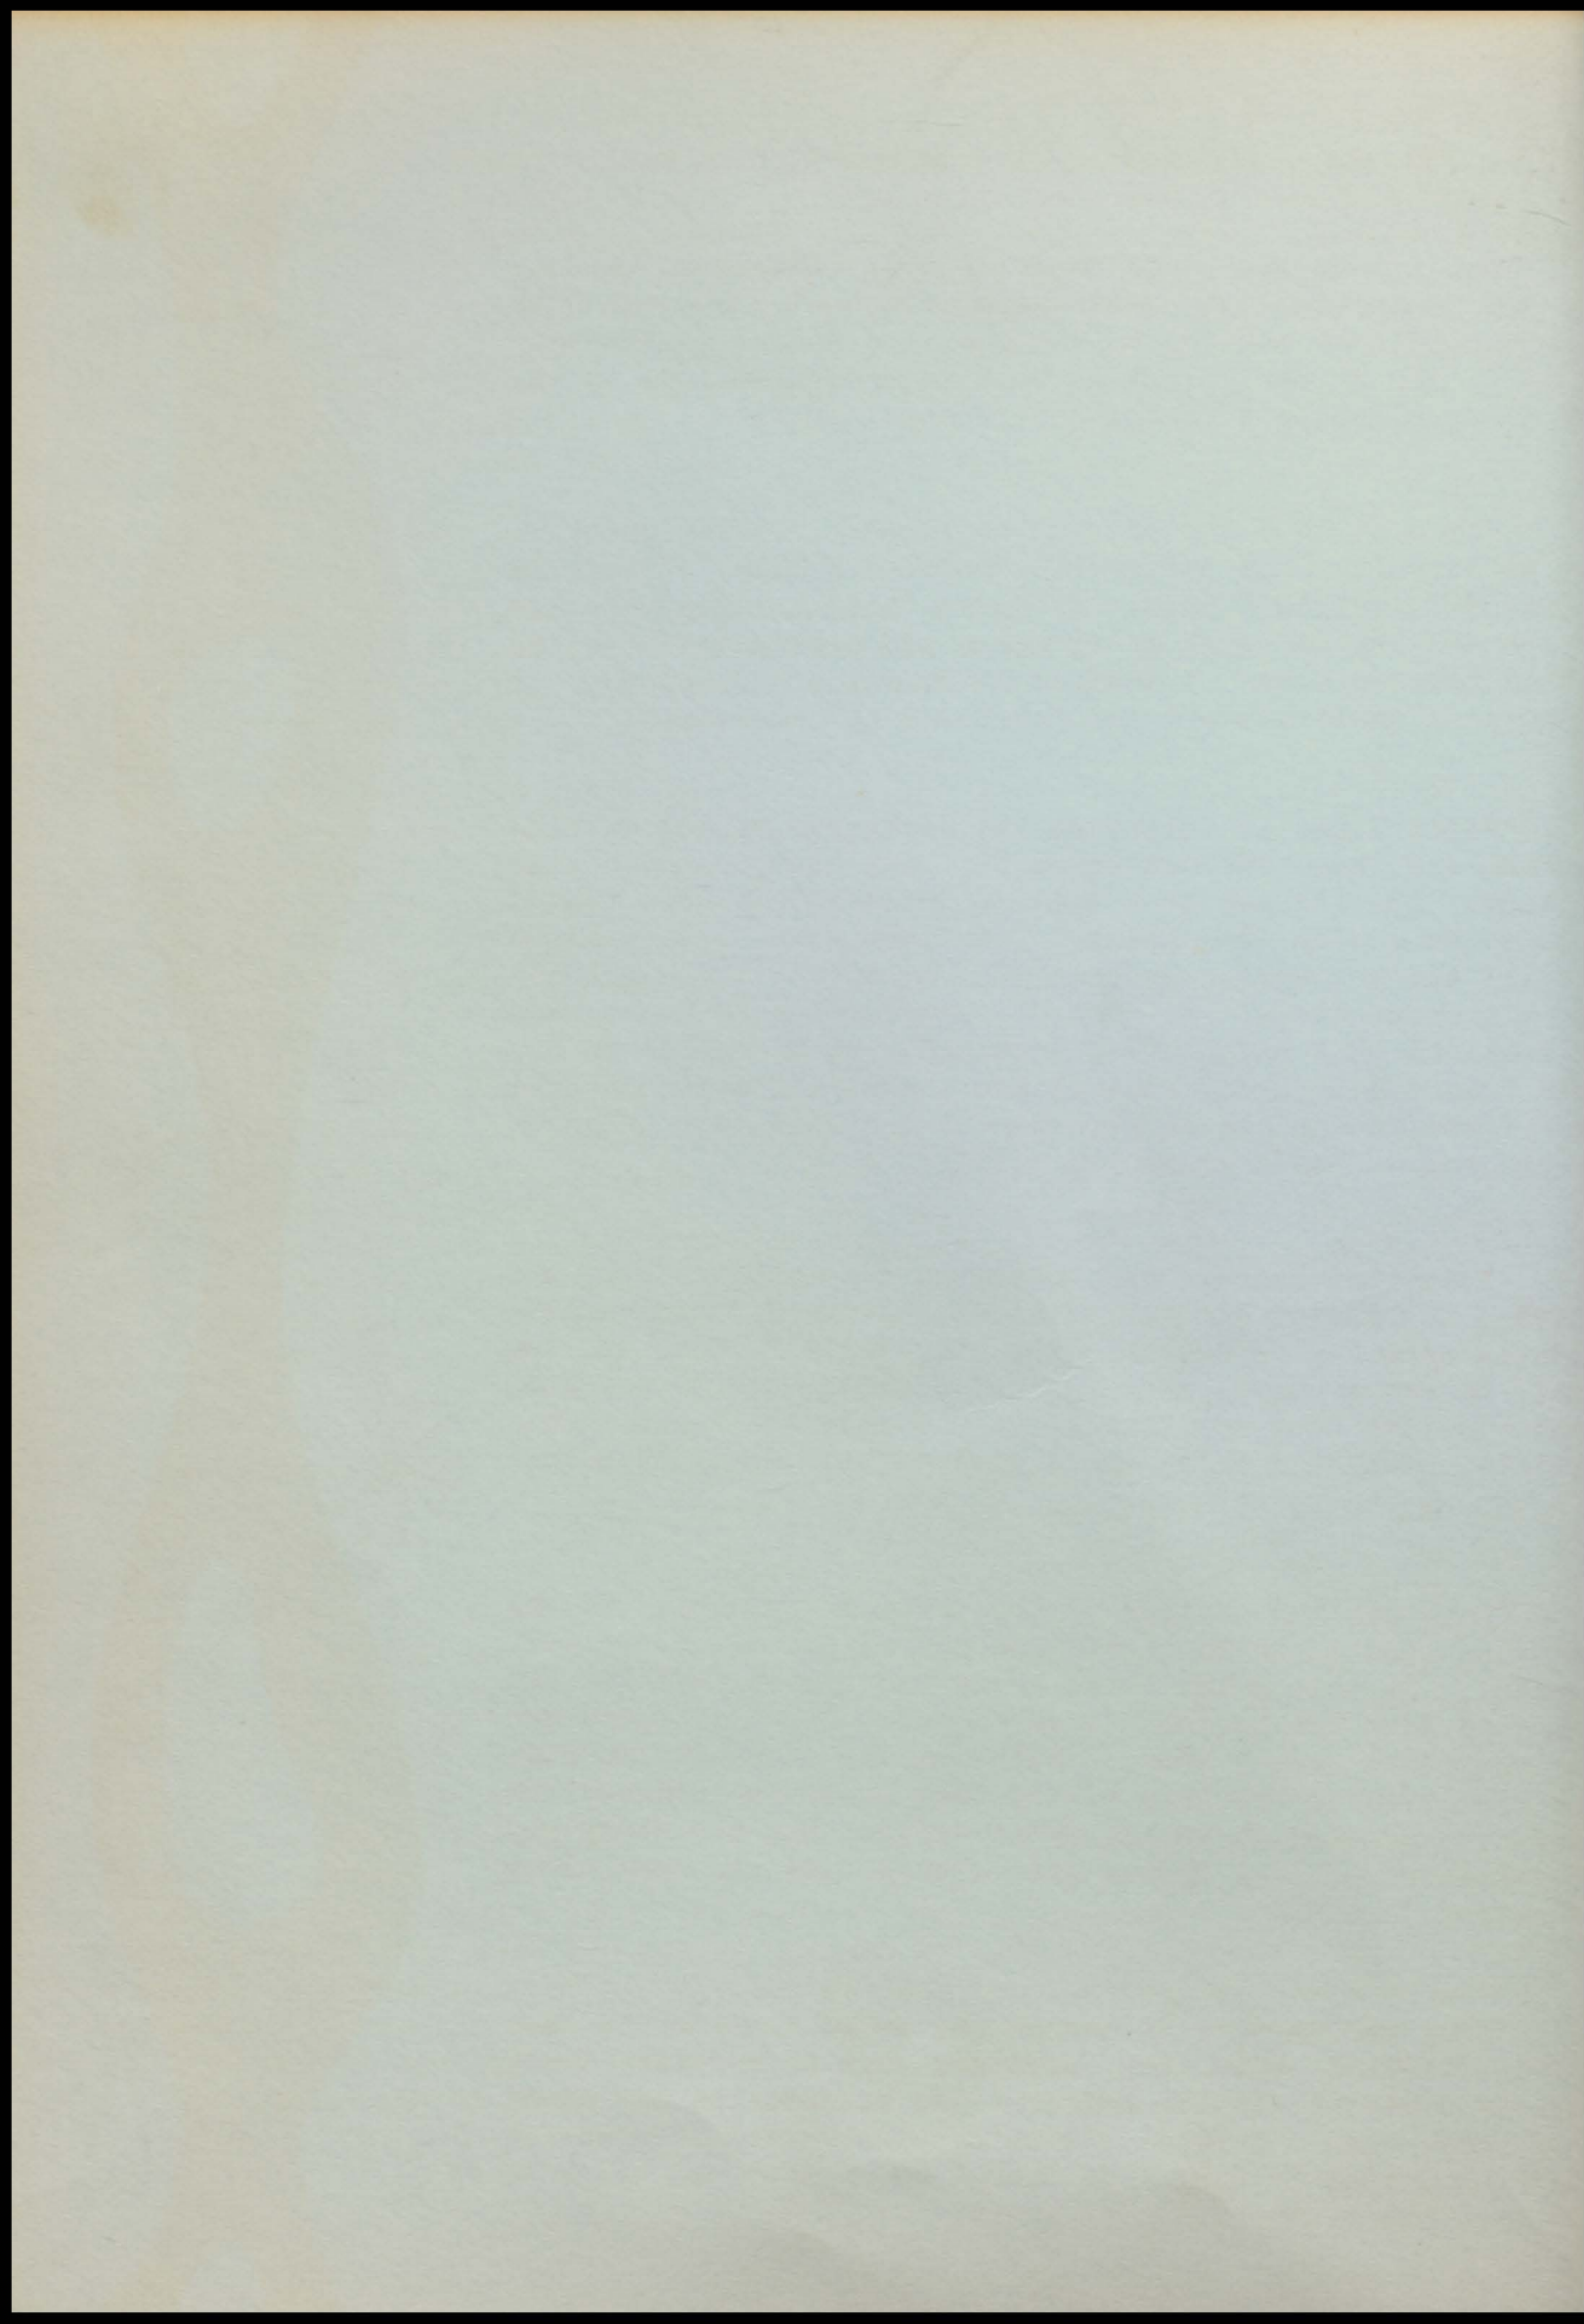

"Then they accompanied me to the construction room and here I recognized another classmate, Richard Eaton, diligently screwing screws into the "Big Brain." Come to find out, he was in charge of the actual building of the machine, since neither Doug nor Charlie could read their own blueprints. Dick told me he would give me the details I needed on the way to my next stop.

"This was the offices of the various branches of the service located on Weighoff Base, one of the new M.A.N.A.F. bases. At this point I was ready to expect anything and marched into the Marine office eagerly, but alas, there was no one there whom I knew. With spirits somewhat lowered, we proceeded to the Army office, Doug Munyon's headquarters. Surprise greeted me in his front office. His secretary was Rosalie Brown. (I knew a girl would have to come along sometime.)

"Doug and Rosalie joined us and we went on to the Navy office. Here again the secretary was a familiar face. Cherry Jones, in full uniform led us into the office of her boss, Ronald Curtis. At this point we all stopped for a few hours of talking. We caught up on what had happened to each other over the past years.

"Finally, remembering my assignment, I left the others behind and went to the Air Force office. It appeared to be completely empty. Suddenly I heard the tremulous roaring of a jet skimming the rooftop. Shortly, in walked Winona Carden with Larry Brodeur right behind her. Nonie was saying, "I told you I'd miss that chimney." I stood there with my mouth hanging open in amazement. Then I snapped out of it and laughed. "Still up to your old driving habits, I see, Nonie!" We all laughed and Nonie told me that if she did her work extra well, Larry would let her buzz the base with one of his test planes.

"I mentioned wanting to get a little extra information on Weighoff Base itself for my article. Then we discovered that only the four head men had had a chance to look over the Base thoroughly, so they offered to take every one on a guided tour and tell us the brief history of the base. Doug Munyon started out by telling us who had given the land for the base. It was a woman rancher who had become rich by developing a new breed of cattle. I was scribbling notes down. When I asked him her name, he said "Patricia Munyon." I wrote it down and then it struck me: Pat, Doug's sister! I looked up and he was smiling broadly and nodded. Then he added, "and she and her foreman are arriving here this afternoon." This was just too much. It meant that nearly our whole class would be here tonight. Boy, what a party we could have! I could hardly wait.

"Next they showed us the village where the personnel lived. I was exclaiming over how amazing it was to have such a complete town right here on the base when Ron Curtis piped up and said, "And the most amazing thing about this town you can't even see." "What's that?" "Well, the way I hear it, a couple of teachers, one civilian and one Marine, have introduced a new method of teaching and the kids here are so smart that pretty soon they'll be out-thinking our UNIVAK." "Boy, they must be a couple of nuts. I'd like to meet them."

"I began to see the possibility of a good story shaping up, and I told Ron that we ought to pay these two wonder workers a visit. School had just gotten out and we all tramped into the school house. As one little straggler darted by, we heard him say, "Come in, G. O." That could mean just one thing: Fred Smead was around here somewhere. Sure enough, Fred was the Marine educator. He told us about the new system and then he asked us if we wanted to meet his co-worker. He said he thought we were in for a pleasant surprise. He went to an adjoining office and returned with Joan Steventon, the civilian teacher.

"Now our reunion was just about complete. We lacked a couple, but what could you expect for an entirely unplanned reunion. We decided to have a big party that night. Everything was settled when Doug Munyon suddenly said, 'Oh darn, I just remembered. They're sending some quack down here tonight who is going to start inspecting our medical system. I have to meet him tonight at eight. I guess we'll have to have one extra at the party, since I'm supposed to entertain the guy. Somebody want to volunteer to go meet Pat?' Of course there was no problem there, so we all went to our rooms to get ready.

"Most of us were there at eight. The others were due from the airport at 8:30. Ronnie drove in with Pat and her foreman at exactly 8:30. Out in the hall we heard a familiar voice say: "People of the United States, my name..". then, big as life, in walked Dick White. It seems that he had expanded from forestry and was in complete charge of all Pat's land. Dick hadn't changed a bit. But where was Doug? He was supposed to be back here half an hour ago. "Here he is", yelled someone. He must have picked up the wrong person at the airport. It looks like a woman with him to me. Sure enough, the quack turned out to be Carolyn Simpson. Now we are all here, every one of us. What a party we had. I never heard so much talking all at once in my life."

- - - - -

"Joan, Joan, WakeUp! Did you read this? It says that you wrote it and it's all about us and our all meeting again. It seems kind of funny for a newspaper article."

"Oh my gosh. Wow, did I goof! Carolyn, do you realize what I've done? I sent my boss the wrong set of notes. That was just something I set down for my personal journal. My news notes are still right here. Well, I guess that just proves times haven't changed much, have they?"
